Gladys R. Montes

With nearly 30 years of experience in the field, Gladys R. Montes has devoted her life to helping young children get off to the best possible start in school and life. A champion for high quality early childhood education, Gladys joined United Way of Miami-Dade in 2004 to spearhead the creation of the United Way Center for Excellence in Early Education and its Demonstration School. Today, the Center is an internationally-recognized best practices teaching and learning center for both children and adults, committed to elevating the quality of early care and education for all children.

As vice president of the United Way Center for Excellence in Early Education, Gladys is at the helm of a collaborative project that is changing the way people define school readiness in Miami-Dade and across the nation. Throughout her career, Gladys has been a vocal advocate for professional development opportunities within the early education field. At the Center, she has created a number of programs for teachers and administrators aimed at elevating their administrative and instructional skills, particularly in the area of early literacy, as well as their understanding of quality and its importance. Gladys is the architect of the children's programming at the Center's Demonstration School, which models many leading-edge, evidence-based best practices including continuity of care, dual language acquisition, visible thinking as well as robust arts, literacy, science and math programs. The Demonstration School enrolls 120 children ages six weeks to 5 years.

During her years at the Center, it has captured the attention of early education experts and advocates from around the country. In 2008, the Center's Demonstration School became the seventh Educare Center in the country. The Center has earned both NAEYC and APPLE accreditation. The Center continues to expand its reach and is currently working with United Ways throughout Latin America to elevate the quality of early education in their respective countries. Gladys serves as an international consultant to P & G in Panama. Gladys is also responsible for United Way's entire portfolio in early education – including United Way's investments in other early education centers in Miami-Dade.

A native of Puerto Rico, Gladys graduated from the University of Puerto Rico with a bachelor's degree in home economics and child development and later earned a master's degree in early childhood education from Nova Southeastern University. Along the way, Gladys has worked as a preschool teacher, a childcare center director, as the associate director for Catholic Charities' early childhood division, as a federal reviewer for Head Start Programs and as a validator with the National Association for the Education of Young Children. She was an early childhood specialist for Western Kentucky University, providing consulting on early childhood issues to programs in the southeastern region of the United States and is an adjunct professor at Miami Dade College and Nova Southeastern University. Gladys was instrumental in the development of the Birth to Three Learning and Development Standards, a project sponsored by the Florida Partnership for School Readiness and the Florida Institute of Education.

Gladys and her husband Oscar are the proud parents of two children, Darlene and Oscar, and grandchildren, Isabella and Ishmael.
