LITTLE ATOMS

STEM Focused

Hands-on Activities

Aligned with Florida
Standards

Led by Science
Educators

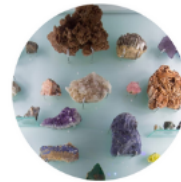

Young Minds Yoga

Little ones will be introduced to movement that will help strengthen the body and mind. As they learn different yoga poses, they will also be provided with fun science facts about the human body and brain.

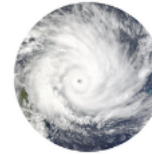

Building Blocks

Little ones will sort, stack, and play with basic building blocks that help develop a child's spatial awareness. Stacking, adjusting and even falling blocks can promote problem solving and critical thinking skills while serving as a basic introduction to physics.

Let's Rock

Little ones will investigate different types of rocks and examine the science behind the hardness of rocks before creating their own 'pet rock' to take home. These early learners will also get to work on their fine motor skills and fuel their curiosity for understanding the natural world around them by discovering which rocks can be scratched.

Spinning Spirals

Whirling, twirling, spinning spiral patterns will be explored as we examine the science behind the shape of a hurricane. Learn why hurricanes spin, what direction they spin (did you know it depends where you are in the world?) and why they have an 'eye' at the center, before creating their own mini vortex in a bottle to take home. Little ones will get to work on their fine motor skills and fuel their curiosity for understanding the natural world around them by exploring spirals on paper, in water, and in bottles.

Build Your Own Outreach

(Starting at $1,000 for 2-hours of programming)

Do you have a specific vision for your event? Not a problem! The build your own outreach program is our most flexible program. We will work with you to create an outreach program that provides you with the experience you want for your event.

Music Makers

Little ones will stimulate their senses through sight, sound, and touch as they engineer musical instruments out of everyday objects and materials. From maracas to drums, the objective is to build a range of different instruments for early learners to explore.

Junior Docs

Little ones will practice listening and looking while investigating the body through role play by becoming a doctor. They will be guided to identify different body parts and their purpose while also using special tools like a child-friendly stethoscope, a thermometer, gauze, and bandages, and even observing a real X-ray.
